MONUMENT TO ABRAHAM LINCOLN IN THE CITY OF WASHINGTON.
In order to give definite shape to the desire so generally expressed that a suitable Monument should be erected in the City of Washington to the memory of Abraham Lincoln, the City Councils of Washington have taken action, resulting in the formation of an Association to be called the LINCOLN NATIONAL MONUMENT ASSOCIATION, with the following officers:

with the following officers:
President—RICHARD WALLACH, Mayor.
Becretary—CROSBY S. NOYES.
Treasurer—GEORGE W. RIGGS.
The Directors will be announced hereafter.
It is proposed to raise for the purpose the sum of at least $100,000 by subscriptions, to be limited in amount from one dollar to ten per individual contributor. Such is the general solicitude to contribute for Such is the general solicitude to contribute for such a purpose that it is not doubted that the amount requisite can be promptly raised and the monument erected within the year 1865.

Duly authorized collectors will be designated for this District, and persons throughout the country disposed to con ribute can send their contributions to GEORGE W. RIGGS, Esq., Treasurer of the Association.

As it may be difficult to send individual receipts for the contributions received, they will be acknowledged from time to time through the public press.

It is earnestly hoped that every newspaper throughout the country will call attention to the object of this Association, and give it such editorial encouragement as shall secure a general recegnition.

It is the desire of the Association to raise a monument that shall be properly commemorative of the sublime life and character of the largented deceased—one that shall be creditable alike to the

LET US BE MERCIPUL TO OURSELVES. The physical structure of the strongest human being is vulnerable everywhere. Our bodies are endowed by nature with a certain negative power, which protects them to some extent from unwholeseme influences; but this protection is im perfect, and cannot safely be relied on in unhealthy regions, or under circumstances of more than ordinary danger. Therefore, it is wisdom, it is prudence, it is common sense to provide against such contingencies by taking an antidote in advance; in other words by fortifying the system with a course of Hostetter's STOMACH BITTERS, the most complete protective against all the epidemic and endemic maladies that has been administered in any country. As a remedy for Dyspepsia, there is no medicine that will compare with it. Whoever suffers the pangs of Indigestion, anywhere on the face of the earth where Hostetten's Bitters can be procured, does so voluntarily; for as surely as the Truth exists, this invaluable Tonic and Alterative would restore his disordered stomach to a healthy condition. To the Billious it is also especially recommended, and in cases of confirmed Constipation it affords speedy and permanent re lief. In Canada, the West Indies, and Australia, the BITTERS rank above all other medicines of the class, and the demand for them in all foreign countries increases every season.

If your wife is alling, if sickness prostrates her, if maternal solicitude and care wear upon her, remember, you are the Heaven appointed guardian of her health. You should not fail to supply her with delicacies which will assist Nature in restor ing her to full vigor. PLANTATION BITTERS are just the thing she needs. Their effect in building up the system, restoring the life forces to their original vigor, creating new blood and adipose matter, is truly magical. my 10-1w

THE ASSASSINATION.

INTERESTING REVELATIONS.

BOOTH AT THE BRIDGE. DR. MUDD'S CONDUCT.

After the close of our report yesterday afternoon, with the evidence of J. C. Hatter-Dr. R. K. STONE testified .- Was sent for by

Mrs. Lincoln immediately after the assassination, and was there within a very few minutes. The President had been carried from the theatre to the house of a gentleman who lived directly opposite, and placed upon a bed in the back part of the house; found several citizens there, and among others, two assistant surgeons of the army, who had brought him over. They immediately gave over the case to my care, in consequence of my professional relation to the family. Witness examined him and found that the President had received a gunshot wound in the back part and left side of his head, into which witness carried his finger and at once informed those around that the case was hopeless: that the President would die; that there was no positive limit to the life; his vital tenacity was very strong; that he would resist as long as any one, but that death would certainly follow. Witness remained as long as it was of any use, but nothing could be done. He died the next morning about half-past seven from the wound. Witness described the ball and the wound, stating that the ball resembled those usually shot from a Derringer pistol, and was a hand made ball. The ball was flattened or compressed somewhat in its passage through the skull, and a little portion had been cut up in its passage through the bone. Witness marked the ball with the initials of the President, A. L., in the presence of the Secretary of War, sealed it up with my private seal, and endorsed my name on the envelope. The Secretary enclosed it in another envelope, which he also endorsed and sealed with his private seal, and is still in his custody. Sergeant SILAS D. COBB testified that he was on the night of the assassination of the President, on duty at the Navy-yard bridge, and saw three men approach rapidly on horseback between half-past ten and eleven o'clock. Witness challenged them, and advanced to them to recognize them. Witness was satisfied that they were proper persons to pass, and passed them. Witness could not identify any of the persons as being one of the men. Witness recognized the photograph of Booth as the man who past first. Witness asked him who he was. He said his name was Booth. I asked him "where from?" He answered from the city. I asked him "where are you going!" "Going home." I asked where his home was: he said in Charles, which I understood to be Charles county. I asked him what town. He said he did'nt live in any town. I said: "You must live in some town." He said: "I live close to Bryantown, but I do not live in town. I asked him why he was out so late; if he did not know persons were not permitted to pass after that time of night. He said it was news to him; he said he had some ways to go, that it was dark, and that he thought he would have a moon. The men approached singly, several en each. The second one who was a small-sized man, did not seem to have been riding rapidly; he was from five to ten minutes later than the first. Witness asked him "who he was?" He said his name was Smith; that he was going to White Plains; and witness asked him how he came to be out so late; he made use of a rather indelicate word in replying, from which I should judge he had been in bad company. Witness had a good view of the man's face before the guard-house door; he was about the same size of Herold, but lighter complexion. Did not think Herold was the man. I allowed him to pass, but the other man I turned back. He did not seem to have sufficient business to warrant me in passing him. He made an inquiry whether a man had passed on a roan horse. The second one who had come up made no inquiry in regard to another horseman. The second horse was a roan, and did not seem to be trotting. I should think it was a kind of half racking. Booth rode a rather under-sized, bright bay, with a smooth shining skin. He looked smooth and as though he had had a short push. He seemed restive and uneasy, much more so than the rider.

Polk Gardener testified that he was on the road between Washington and Bryantown on the right of the 14th of April, and about 11 o'clock met two men riding very fast in the direction of Marlboro. I met the first one on Good Hope Hill, the last one about half a mile beyond. The first stopped and asked me the road to Marlboro; the other did not speak to me. He was riding a roan or iron grey. The ball extracted from the wound of President Lincoln having been received from the War Department, Dr. Stone was again called on the stand, and, on examining it, identified it fully as the ball extracted by him.

W. T. KENT testified that he picked up the pistol in the box of the theatre the night of the assassination I suppose about three minutes after the President was shot, I went into the box; there were two persons in there then. The surgeon asked me for a knife to cut open the President's clothes. I handed him mine, and with it he cut the President's clothes open. I left the theatre. Afterwards I missed my night-key, and thought I had dropped it there. I hurried back to the theatre, and when I went into the box my foot knocked against a pistol lying on the floor. I picked it up and cried out, "I have found the pistol!" Some persons there told me to give it to the police, but there was a gentleman who said he represented the Associated Press, and I handed it to him. The next morning I went around to the police station and recognized it as the pistol I had picked up. Lient. Loverr testified that after the assassiwent by the house of Dr. Mudd, whom he recognized as one of the prisoners. We first asked him whether there had been any strangers at his house. He said there had. At first he did not seem to care about giving us any satisfaction; then he went on and stated that on Saturday morning at daybreak, two strangers came to his place; one came to the door, and the other sat on his horse; that he went down and opened the door, when the other man got off his horse and came into the house; that one of them had a broken leg, and that he had set the leg. I asked him who the man was. He said he did not know; he was a stranger to him. He stated that they were both strangers. I asked him what kind of a looking man the other was. He said he was a young man, about 17 or 18 years old. He said they remained there a short time. This was the first conversation I had with him. This was en Tuesday, the 18th. He said he had heard of the assassination on Sunday, at church. His house from Washington by way of Bryantown is about thirty miles, I suppose. We did not talk much about the assassination; I was making inquiries more about these men than anything else. He said one of them called for a razor; that he farnished him with a razor, soap and water to shave his moustache off. I asked him if he had any other beard; he replied "yes, a long pair of whiskers." He said one of them went away on crutches, and that he showed them the way across the swamp. He said the other one led his horse, and that he had a pair of crutches made for him; I was entirely satisfied that these parties were Booth and Herold. Some of the other men along with me made the remark it looked suspicious, and Mr. Mudd then also said it looked suspicious. At the first interview I had, my mind was made up to arrest him when the proper time came. The second interview occurred on Friday, the 21st. I went there for the purpose of arresting e purpose of arresting him. When he found that we were going to search the house, he said something to his wife, and then brought down a boot and handed it to me. He said he had to cut it off in order to set the man's leg. I turned the boot down, and saw some writing on the inside—

...J. Wilkes." I called his attention to it. He said he had not taken notice of it before. | A large cavalry boot, slit down the leg, was brought in, passed round, and examined by the members of the court. On the inside, near the top of the leg, under the name of the maker, were the words "J. Wilkes," written plainly, in ink | He still insisted that they were strangers to him, but said subsequently that he was satisfied it was Booth. That was on Friday; the same day; he made the remark that his wife had told him she saw the whiskers at one time become disconnected from the man's face. After I had arrested him, and we had got on our horses and were going out, some of the men gave him Booth's photograph. They held it up to him, and asked him if it did not look like Booth. He said that it was not like Booth; that it looked a little like him across the eyes. Shortly after that he said he had an introduction to Booth last fall; he said a man by the name of Johnson gave him an introduction to him. On being questioned by one of the other men, he said he had rode with him in the country leeking up some land, and when he bought a horse last fall. He said he wanted a good road horse. I asked him if the whiskers of one been false, and he said he did not know; it appeared afterward that Booth had gone up stairs, but the Doctor did not tell of that. At our first interview he told me they stayed but a short time, and afterward his wife told me that they stayed until three or four o'clock on Saturday afternoon. I did not ask him whether he charged anything for setting the leg. My question was as to whether the men had much money. He said they had a considerable lot of greenbacks. I then asked him if they had arms about them, to which he replied that the wounded man had a brace of revolvers. When I went to Dr. Mudd's the first time, I had a conversation with his wife. As soon as lasked him whether the two strangers had been there he told me at once that they had. He was made aware of the nature of our errand, I suppose, by a friend. He seemed very much excited, and turned very pale when he was first asked about the two strangers, though he admitted they had been there. Q. When on the occasion of your second interview you mentioned the name of Booth, he then told you he had been introduced! A. I did not mention it until we were on horseback, though I had previously mentioned Booth's name to the other doctor. Q. You say that Dr. Mudd seemed very much alarmed! A Yes, ne turned very pale in the face and blue about the lips. like a man who was frightened at the recol-lection of something he had done. He seemed very much concerned when I turned the boot inside out. Some of the men present said that the name "Booth" had been scratched out, when I suggested that it had not been written.

JOSHUA LLOYD testified that he was engaged in the pursuit of the assassins. His testimony,

Dr. Mudd's manner was very evasive, he seemed to be very reserved.

however, does not differ from that of Lieut. Cor. H. H. WELLS, Provost Marshal of the Defenses south of Washington, testified that he had an interview with Dr. Mudd on Friday, the 21st of April. I had three definite conversations with him. The first conversation occurred, I think, about noon on Friday. I had the Doctor brought to my headquarters, and took his statement He commenced by remarking that on Saturday morning, about 4 o'clock, he was aroused by a loud knock at his door. He was surprised at the loudness of the knock, and inquired who was there. Receiving some reply, as I understood, he looked from the window or went to the door, and saw standing in his front yard a person holding two horses, and another sitting on one of the horses. He described the appearance of the persons, and said the younger of the two was very fluent in his speech, and that the person on horseback had broken his leg, and desired medical attend. ance. He assisted in bringing the person who was on horseback into the house, and laying him upon the sofa in the parlor, and after some time he was carried up stairs and laid on a bed in what was called the front room; he then proceeded to examine the leg, and discovered that the outward bone was broken nearly at right angles across the limb, about two inches above the instep; he said it was not a compound fracture; that the patient complained of pain in his back, but he found no apparent cause for the pain, except as proceeding from the effect of a fall from a horse, as the patient stated he had fallen; he said that he dressed the limb as well as he was able to do with the limited facilities at his command, and called a white hired servant to make a crutch for their patient. The crutch was made. Breakfast was then prepared, and the younger of the persons, the one who was uninjured, was invited to breakfast with them. The prisoner further stated that after breakfast he noticed his patient to be much worn, debilitated, and pale. The young man made some remark in relation to procuring some conveyance for taking his friend away, and that some time after dinner he started with him to see if a carriage could be procured. After traveling for some distance, and failing to procure a carriage, the young man remarked that he would not go any further, but would return to the house, and see if he could not get his friend away. The doctor stated, also, that after going to the town, which was the furthest point of his journey, he returned to his house about 4 o'clock in the afternoon. In speaking of the wounded man, I asked him if he knew who the person was, to which he replied that he did not recognize him I then exhibited to him what was said to be a miniature of Booth, and he said that from the miniature he could not recognize him. He stated, however, in answer to another question, that he met Booth sometime in November. I think he said that he was introduced by a Mr. Thompson, to Booth. I think the introduction took place at church on a Sunday morning, and after the introduction had been given, Thompson said that Booth wanted to buy farming lands .-They had some conversation on the subject of lands, and then Booth asked the question whether there were any desirable horses that could be bought cheap in that section, and he mentioned the name of several dealers in desirable stock in the neighborhood. I asked him if he could recognize again the person whom he then met, under the name of Booth. He said he could. I asked him if he had seen Booth at any time after the introduction in November, and prior to his arrival there on Saturday merning. He said he had not—I asked him if he had any suspicion of the character of Booth or either of these persons. He said he had not, but that after breakfast he thought there was something strange about their actions in view of the fact that the younger man came down stairs and asked for a razor and said his friend wanted to shave himself, and that shortly afterward he noticed that the person answering to the name of Booth had shaved off his moustache. I asked him if the man had a beard, when he said that he had, and that it was longer than my own, but he could not determine whether it was natural or artificial; that he kept a shawl about his neck, and seemed to desire to conceal the nation he was engaged in the pursuit of the lower part of his face. I asked him at this murderer. Took the road by Surrattsville and time if he had heard of the murder of the President. He replied that he had not. I think, however, he remarked to me in one of his interviews that he heard of the assassination for the first time on on Sunday morning or late in the evening of Saturday. My impression is that he did not hear of it until after these persons had left his house. The witness stated further that, when leaving, Herold inquired for the most direct route to Mr. Wilmer's house, and that the prisoner gave him the desired information. The prisoner also communicated to the witness all the particulars concerning the discovery of the boot in the house occupied by him. Q. At the time Mudd gave you this information did you see anything in his manner that was extraordinary! A. He did not seem willing to answer a direct question, and I saw that unless I asked direct questions all important facts were omitted by him. Q. Was he alarmed? A. He was much excited. Q. Andalarmed? A. Not at the first nor second interview, but at the third he was. Q. At the first interview did you have any written statement made? A. No, sir; I kept on talking with him, and after I thought I had the facts I had it taken down in writing; we had had a dozen interviews at least. Q. When was the last interview! A. On Sunday, I think. Q. Did you have more than one on Friday? A. He was in my presence for almost 5 hours; we were talking there from time to time. Q. You said that at the last interview he was much alarmed from some statement you made?

A. I said to him that he was concealing the facts, and that I didn't know whether he understood that was the strongest evidence that could be produced of his guilt at that time, and

A communication was presented from the Mayor, transmitting the report of the civil engineers appointed under the act approved

September 23, 1864, entitled "An act authorizing the Mayor to employ an engineer to examine the plans proposed for the improvement of the canal;" referred The report embraces sixty pages of legal foolscap, and is accompanied by elaborate drawings showing the plan of the proposed new sewer to be created

$15,000, to pay certain outstanding claims against the Central Guardhouse—was taken up: and after debate was passed. Mr. Utermehle, from the finance committee. reported the tax bill from the lower board with amendments. The bill imposes a tax of 5 cents on every hundred dollars of the assessed value of real and personal property and of the assessed amount of capital employed in the business of bankers, brokers and money lenders. Section 7 imposes a tax of one-half the cost of lighting the corporation lamps, the tax to be assessed upon the lots fronting on such streets as shall be lighted. Section 8 imposes an additional tax of 15 cents on each hundred dollars for the payment of the expenses of the Metropolitan Police. Section 9 imposes an additional tax of ten cents on each hundred dollars for the payment of the deficiency in the collection of the U. S. tax imposed on the city by act of Congress, approved July 1st, 1864. Section 10 provides that on all taxes accruing under this act the Collector may allow an abatement as follows: If paid on or before the last day of August, 1865, six per cent, on or before the last day of October, 1865, three per cent. After the last day of October no abatement shall be allowed, and the abatement not to be allowed upon taxes accruing upon property aiready in arrears until such arrearages are paid

The proposed amendments to the Council bill strike out the 7th, 8th and 9th sections, imposing additional taxes, and modify the 10th section so as to provide that on all taxes accruing under the act the Collector may allow an abatement as follows: If paid on or before the last day of August, 1865, 10 per cent; on or before the last day of September, 1865, 8 per cent; on or before the last day of October, 1865, 1 per cent; and after the last day of October no abate-

After some debate, on motion of Mr. Lloyd, the bill was laid over until a special meeting on Friday night. Mr. Turton, from the committee on drainage, reported a bill to lay a water main along M street north, from 11th to 12th streets west, with a substitute, proposing to lay the main in-stead, along 12th to Massachusettes avenue, to M street, and along M street, from 11th to 14th streets. The substitute was passed.

Mr. Turton, from the same committee, also reported a bill to lay a water main along Vermont avenue, from N to 14th streets; passed.

Mr. Utermehle, from the police committee, reported unfavorably upon the bill permitting Minnie Oldman to retain a recently erected wooden shed on her premises, and the bill was

Mr. Utermehle, from the same committee also reported a bill granting permission to R. B. Clark and E. L. Morrison, to erect an iron railing in frent of their premises, four feet from the building line. Mr. Plant presented a remenstrance to the passage of the bill, signed by Wm. H. Dann and others living on that square, and after debate, the bill was passed. Mr. McCathran, from the committee on claims, reported a bill for the relief of J. R. Murray. The bill was accompanied by a substitute appropriating $332 62 for the settlement of the claims of all other parties like those of Mr. Murray, namely, corporation paving certificates, which was passed. Mr. Plant, from the committee on fire department, reported back the letter of Mr. A. B. Talcott, superintendent of the fire alarm telegraph, in relation to the repair of the Columbia Engine House, and the communication was placed on the files of the Board.

Mr. Noves, from the committee on schools reported a bill appropriating $500 for the repair of the Wallach school house building. Also, from the Seventh Ward delegation, the bill to pave the alleys in square No. 500; passed. The resolutions from the Common Council, discountenancing the return to the city of men who went South and participated in the rebellion, were taken up. Mr. Utermehle, in consideration of the late ness of the hour, asked a postponement of the subject till next Monday night, and to make it the special order.

Mr. Plant insisted on their being acted upon at once, and called for the yeas and nays on the postponement.

After debate, Mr. Lloyd renewed the metion to postpone, and called the yeas and nays. The motion was lost. Yeas-Aldermen Lloyd, Lewis, Turton, and Iltermeble-4.

Nays-Aldermen Barr. Canfield, McCathron, Noyes, Plant, and the President -- 6.
Mr. Utermeble offered the following as a substitute for the bill:

Resolved by the Board of Aldermen and Board of Common Council of the city of Washington, That we have entire confidence in the integrity, wisdom, and patriotism of our present Executive, and we will heartily, cheerfully, and unanimeusly approve of and commend any policy which may be devised, adopted, and executed to the return of persons to our city who were recently engaged in the late unnatural and destructive rebellion.

The substitute was lost by the following Yeas-Messrs. Lloyd, Lewis, Turton, and Utermehle. Nays-Messrs. Barr, Canfield, McCathron, Noyes, Plant, and Mr. Brown, the President-6. Mr. Lloyd then offered as a substitute the resolutions introduced into the lower Board by Mr. Wright, of the 7th Ward, which were also lost by the following vote:

Yeas—Messrs. Lloyd, Lewis, Turton, and Utermeble-4.

Nays-Messrs. Barr, Canfield, McCathron. Noyes, Plant, and Mr. Brown, the President—6. On motion of Mr. Noyes, the substitute offered by Mr, Utermehle was added to the resolutions of the lower Board, and the resolutions as amended, were then passed by the Yeas-Messrs. Barr, Canfield, Lewis, McCathron, Noyes, Plant, Turton, Utermehle, and Mr. Brown—9. Nay—Mr. Lloyd.

In the progress of the debate, (which the mass of evidence in the conspiracy trial crowds out,) the President, Mr. Brown, made the following personal explanation: .
"In the printed sketch of my remarks at the meeting last week in front of the City Hall, I am reported as having said that "within the last twenty minutes I had been requested by the Mayor to preside at this meeting, and to say that he endorsed the movement," &c. This was an error of the reporter, unintentional I am sure. What I did say was that, "within the last twenty minutes I had been called upon to preside, as the Acting Mayor, in the absence of the Mayor, &c.," in reply to the questions, "where is the Mayor? why don't he preside? is he against us, &c." I said: "the Mayor is sick." in bed; I cannot say positively that he approves of the objects of the meeting, but I can say that in my opinion he ought to, and I believe does; for the men whose return we ask the Government to prevent, were the very men who, more than all others, twice defeated his election to the mayoralty by violence and fraud, and he certainly cannot desire that they shall be permitted now to come back and war upon his administration, and again control our city elections, as they assuredly will seek to do. For these, and other reasons, which to my mind are satisfactory, I conclude that the Mayor cannot be opposed to the end songht to be accomplished by this meeting, but I have no right distinctly to pledge his approval of it. He does not shirk responsibility, and when the resolutions which have to-night passed the Common Council, with but two dissenting votes, and will next Monday I believe unanimously pass the Board of Aldermen, are presay that in my opinion he ought to, and I bemously pass the Board of Aldermen, are pre-sented to him, he will decide, and by that de-cision abide." This was all I said committing the Mayor for or against; and I saw the re-porters to note my remarks now in justice to all concerned."

Adjourned till Friday night.
